Forecast for Wednesday 02 Mar 2022

Weather: A mainly dry, sunny but windy day with very little cloud through the morning. However, cloud will start to thicken for Skye, Torridon and other southern hills through early afternoon, with outbreaks of rain and sleet, and occasional hill fog by late-afternoon. Best conditions through the afternoon will be in the northern hills, including Ben Hope and Ben More Assynt, where rain and sleet will not move in until the evening.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 800m: 90% or greater in the morning and northern hills through the afternoon. Lowering 50% as cloud and rain move in later.

Low cloud and visibility: Very good through the morning will few amounts of cloud. Similar for northern hills through the afternoon, but visibility lowering moderate in rain and sleet, and very poor in hill fog, where cloud bases will lower 400-700 m at times.
